Blue Mountains

Take a scenic three hour drive west of Sydney and discover the magnificent Blue Mountains, which were first crossed in 1813 by explorers Blaxland, Wentworth and Lawson. This World Heritage Listed National Park is recognised internationally for its incredible geographic, botanic and cultural values and boasts a stunning landscape of dense eucalypt forest, grand escarpments, waterfalls and cave systems.

The area is home to 90 different species of eucalyptus trees and the greatest and most diverse concentration of eucalyptus trees in the world. Ever wonder why the Blue Mountains are called blue? The air is filled with several finely dispersed droplets of eucalyptus oil. These oil droplets not only delightfully perfume the air, but combined with dust and water vapour, they scatter rays of brilliant blue light earning this spectacular mountain range its name.

One of the most striking landmarks of the Blue Mountains is the amazing rock formation known as the Three Sisters. Each pinnacle stands at 922, 918 and 906 metres tall respectively. The best place to view of the Three Sisters is from Echo Point, a lookout perched on the edge of a 170 metre cliff face. Here you can learn about the Aboriginal dreamtime legend of the Three Sisters.

Travelling through the Blue Mountains you'll come across a number of quaint villages and towns such as the picturesque village of Leura.

Highlights

- The Three Sisters - View this rock formation up close from Echo Point.
- Jamison Valley - Experience the amazing views across the valley.
- Leura - Enjoy free time to explore the antique shops and galleries during a lunch break.
- Megalong Valley - Follow the Cliff Drive for breathtaking views.
- Katoomba - Travel through the heart of the Blue Mountains.
- Sydney Zoo - See native Australian animals - kangaroos, wallabies, emus, dingoes, koalas, wombats in an open-range, cage-free environment.
- Aboriginal guides - Follow the pathways that lead to the Bungaribee Dreaming Experience and learn about traditional tools, artefacts and bush tucker.
