There's a reason Fraser Island is regarded as Australia's number one whale-watching destination! The humpbacks aren't just passing by each August through October - they're taking time out in the calm, sheltered waters off our western bay to socialise, have some fun, learn some essential life skills and nurture their young.

The humpbacks' natural curiosity takes over. They glide up to the boats and in return, put on an almighty show - slapping their tails, waving their pec fins and breaching into the air, for a truly larger-than-life spectacle. Everyone is encouraged to wave their arms and make a bit of noise, to capture the attention of these inquisitive creatures.
